Marper's Magazine for May, 1877. Harper's Magazine for May, with a score of articles and pinety-five illustrations, is replete with variety and superbly beautiful.

The gem of the Number is Mrs. Francis L. Mace's poem Israill, with eight illustrations by Fredericks. Both the poet and the artist have displayed rare qualities of genius in A richly illustrated article on Florence is contributed by O. M. Spencer, author of the article recently published on Genoa.

Wirt Sikes contributes another illustrated article about Wales—selecting this time the valley of the Usk, and especially the site of King Arthur's Round Table. King Arthur's Round Table.

Mrs. Mary Treat gives some fresh obsverva-tions concerning the familiar birds of the South, with striking illustrations. An illustrated article by Ernest Ingersoll, entitled At the Gateway of the Catskill, is an inter sting sketch of a region in the neigh-borhood of the metropolis, but still retaining the primitive customs of the last century.

In An old Gentleman's Recollections,

Horace E. Soudder gives some entertaining extracts from the diary of Mr. Samuel Breck, relating to society in Boston and Philadel-phia, just after the Revolution, with illustra-tions from that gentleman's sketches. as heart could wish for. In matter and illustration, it is wholly admirable and delightful, wonder of beauty and interest, sure to oring delight and pleasure to every home it enters, and to make all its readers happy, whether young or old.

John G. Whittier furnishes the opening prem entitled Red Riding-Hood and one of the sweetest in verse and tone that the good Doet has written for many years.

A charming letter from Charles Dickens in exact fac-simile of the great novelist's own handwriting, is given near the beginning, and Mr. Donald G. Mitchell, stirring and splendidly illustrated talk about Ivanhoe, will fire the hearts of all the boy-lovers of Sir Walter scott.

Saxe Holm contributes a long and excellent story, The First Time, illustrated by Eytinge; there is a fine Fairy story, with superb pictures by Alfred Frederics; and the lively narrative of The Discontented Dowager contributes that tains two of the very best pictures that Evtinge has ever drawn.

Eytinge has ever drawn.
Sidney Lanier is represented by an admirable Oriental story, full of life and wit, and showily illustrated by Mr. Bensell. A rich store of funny things is also given us in Elizabeth Stuart Pheips's story of Trotty's Lecture-Bureau, the poem of Fluffy and Snuffy, finely illustrated by Addle Ledyard, and The Sed between Hinney Hon with comical plan.

inely illustrated by Addle Ledyard, and The Sad btory of Hippety-Hop, with comical pictures by Hopkins.

Dr. J. G. Holland has a talk with big boys; Professor Richard A. Proctor's Stars in May gives us a pleasing glimpse of the wonders of Science; Mrs. Mary Treat's Florida Fishers touches on the wonders of Natural History; and Frank R. Stockton's Sleeping Courier is a description of a novel scene in an Eastern deseri. Then, too, the article on Four Hundeseri. deseri. Then, too, the article on Four Hun-dred Cows with Red Ears narrates a curious incident in history, and a French story for translation is included near the close.

Celia Thaxter's Marjorie, Edgar Fawcett's Grass, and the verses Not only in the Christmas-tide are poems of true, pure sentiment; The Worthy Poor conveys a useful moral in a most telling and delightful way; while An Open Secret, A Ball's a Ball, and Q and U all are dainty bits of verse, and all daintily illus-

Lucy Larcom's Songs of Spring takes us into the fields and the open air, among the budding flowers and blossoms. The missionary to the Flat-Head Indians (in this installment) is indignant at the proposal of his friends to give him a testimonial, but, make it an endowment, he says, and I am with you!" An original way of dealing with the boy in mission school who pulls hair and and asks impertinent questions is also suggested in this installment. The other serial, That Lass o'Lowries, by Mrs. Armstrong & Co. This writer has also in this number a short story, entitled Esmeralds, containing some North Carolina dialect. John Burroughs tells an o'er-true tale of A London Adventure with confidence men. Besides the humorous verse in the Bric-a-Brac, departarticle, from which we make the following Emma Lazarus, and R. In the same way, President Johnson's breach with the Republican party involved on his part no treachery to the platform or the professions of the canvasz which had but recently closed. Johnson was nominated for Vice-President because he was a southern war Democrat; and the platform on which he had been elected laid down no rules for the reconstruction of the Southern States, because at the time that platform was framed it was not supposed that the Southern Confederacy would collapse so soon. It is true that previous to his accession Mr. Johnson had advocated the severest punishment for the leaders of ideas upon that matter shortly after he prey to the strategy of the Mikado. The and which the Commissioners sought to became charged with the actual responsibilities of power; but the party had not officially taken any ground upon this subject, and so far as Mr. Lincoln's views are known, the course proposed by Mr. Johnson was rather in harmony than in antagonism with them. Yet, going against the prevailing sentiment of the Republican leaders and conducting himself with more violence than discretion, Mr. Johnson at once became engaged in a deadly conflict with them which culminated in his impeachment, overwhelmed him with public contempt and detestation, and scarcely ended with bis

June 4 '70-1v. -Centennial Dix to the front again

President Hayes has concluded to give the old man another chance. Perhaps the President is right, for no administra tion would be complete without the ser vices of the venerable Boy in Blue; certainly none within the recollection of the oldest inhabitant has ventured to exist many months without his supporting arm. It may be questioned, however, whether the President has put him where he will do the most good in appointing him chairman of a commission to investigate the rottenness of the New York Custom House. The honesty of the dear old boy cannot be successfully impeached, and his zeal is as great as his years, but his limbs are rather stiff for the nimble movements necessary to catch up with the Custom House sharps. The President should see that a first-rate liniment forms a part of the supplies furnished this commission. Phila. Times.

-A South Carolina poet in the Charleston News thus concludes a little requiem on Chamberlain:

Take him by the hand, Jimmy, sprightly, Jimmy Blaine, (You, who were so anxious that he should here remain). Lift him to his feet again, let him once more reign, Let him be your Governor, Governor of Maine!
